

PROCESS

Henning Larsen Architects is involved in building and counselling projects all over the world. Our processes and working methods are continually developed in connection with new projects and in collaboration with new partners across countries and professional fields.

For Henning Larsen Architects, a good process is about embracing the unpredictable while at the same time - by means of tight and competent management - being able to guide a team of stakeholders and professionals safely through a process, from the conception of the first idea to submission of the completed product. The road to a good result is through a dynamic process in which the various core competences meet and contribute to mutual development and progress.

A good process is essential for the maintenance of the vision and quality of a project. A high level of quality through the entire process is secured by means of a particular focus on:

- The quality of the project (spatiality, aesthetics, functionality, finances)
- The quality of the collaboration (responsiveness, flexibility and trust)
- The quality of the organisation (competences, experience and expertise)

Four key concepts help to ensure a good process on all our projects: IDEA DEVELOPMENT, COLLABORATION, PROJECT MANAGEMENT AND QUALITY ASSURANCE.
